Here are some hypothetical situations. Assume that the main character in each (named by letter) is a Christian. How can that person transform a bad situation into a good one?

A says she won't date non-Christian guys. But this guy says he'll come to church with her if she'll go out with him.

The guys in the locker room were bragging about sex. B joined in, making up stuff about himself and his girlfriend. She heard about it and got mad.

C was a girl with a good reputation, until some classmate started spreading lies about what a tramp she was.

D and his girlfriend had abstained from sex. Then he learned that she cheated on him and had sex with a guy while D was away on a mission trip. Now she's sorry.

E thought her date was a good Christian guy, until he started making sexual advances. He said it was her fault he was so turned on, because she wore such sexy and skimpy clothing.

F finally got to go out with a girl he had liked for a long time. Then she told him she was just trying to make her ex-boyfriend jealous.

G and her boyfriend had been really good, promising to save their virginity for marriage. But one night they went too far, and now they feel terribly guilty.

H is a guy with a major crush on a Christian girl at school. He thinks about her non-stop. Now she's his lab partner, and he's terrified.
